Createspace, United States, 2015. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . In the opening paragraph of Dr. Cram s sketch we see that in the Walled Towns the prime object of all education is the development of inherent character, and for this reason it is never divorced from religion, etc. Now the religious conditions of this country continue to present the same difficulty that was encountered by Horace Mann at the beginning of our public school system. A multitude of warring religious sects still continue their irreconcilable contentions, and as each has equal right in a school maintained from the public treasury, it is not easy to see how religion may be made the basis of the work in our public schools. The Walled Towns sketched by Dr. Cram avoid this difficulty by congregating in each town citizens professing the same religion. Were it possible for us to do this, we might avoid this difficulty as well as many others, but I greatly fear that we are not near this condition at present and, if we ever reach it, it will be after we of the present generation are gathered to our fathers. But where we have schools maintained by any one religious denomination we can and should be very thorough in our acceptance and practical carrying out of Dr. Cram s recommendations. The whole curriculum and all our methods in such schools should be recast so as to make religion the vital center of our work and we should banish rigidly secularized education, which should be as abhorrent to us as to the dwellers in the Walled Towns. It is only in this way that we may hope to escape the retrogression in character, the loss of sound standards of value, and...
