Latitude, and longitude 17 E., and 1250 W. Longitude, extending through 29 degrees of latitude and 58 degrees of longitude, and comprise a superficial area of upwards of square miles. The frontier line has a length of miles, Of which about 3600 are sea-coast, and 1200 lake-coast. A line drawn across from the Atlantic to the Pacific, through the centre, is about 2500 miles in length. So vast a region of course includes a great variety of surface, soil, and climate. It abounds in navigable rivers, and a large proportion of it is susceptible of cultivation, and is of a quality calculated to repay the labour bestowed upon it, more than almost any other region of the same extent in the...
